GRAND CRU CLASSÉ EN 1855

2011

Spring came early and invited the vines to grow strongly. The hot, dry weather brought a smile to the winegrowers' faces, keeping disease at bay and raising hopes of an early harvest, often one of the keys to a very good vintage.

Flowering took place particularly early, around mid-May, in very dry weather which often meant sparse clusters and small berries. Then nature changed its plans and sent us a muted summer, though we still nurtured the hope of a true Bordeaux vintage, mature but fresh and well-balanced. Showers throughout September raised fears of a threat to the health of the crop, but a timely Indian summer stabilised the situation.

The grapes had to be sorted, of course, but our facilities have two sorting lines for precisely that purpose.

Ultimately, the grapes that went into the vats were perfectly healthy and fully ripe. As in previous years, extraction was especially easy.

More anecdotally, more than half the crop reached the winery in trailers drawn by our draft horses who, the rest of the year, are used over an increasingly extensive part of the estate.

Tasting

The wine has great depth of colour and a fresh, incredibly pure nose which pleasantly combines minerality, fruit aromas and floral notes.

Energetic and with fabulous substance, it displays consummate balance on the palate, with a magical radiance and a taffeta mouthfeel. Fruit, tannins and acidity all combine harmoniously.

The magical encounter of a great terroir and biodynamics. A new masterpiece!
